

VLAG PhD Lunch Lecture 5 June

In the amphitheatre of Impulse the VLAG PhD council had organised a lunch lecture about Students and Entrepreneurship. The lecture was given by Jan Meiling from StartLife. Startlife is an initiative from Wageningen UR. It is there to provide students, PhD students, Post-docs and all other employees with a starting point if they want to become an entrepreneur in Life Science.

The route to become a good entrepreneur was clearly explained by Jan Meiling. During the interactive session many PhD students asked questions. For example, the following questions were asked “When should I start my own company, during my PhD?” or “How to deal with intellectual property issues”.

If you want to commercialise your PhD research or related Life Science research do not hesitate to discuss the variety of options with Startlife. Many successful companies started their business at Wageningen UR. Startlife helps people with financial support, location, paperwork and much more. Still wondering how to continue? Start Life and VLAG often give workshops for PhD students and post-docs on entrepreneurship and to start up a company!

The VLAG PhD council thanks all the PhD students for attending the lunch lecture.
