Publishing: How to keep the Editor happy

Prof. Dr. Jan Willem van Groenigen

Jan Willem is professor in the Soil Biology Chair Group and the Editor in chief of the journal Geoderma. He is responsible for setting the course of the journal, the composition of the editorial team and the quality of the peer review process. During the lunch lecture Jan Willem will focus on why editors reject certain papers and how to improve the chance of getting your manuscripts accepted. He will discuss this based on some examples and of course your questions about publishing are very welcome.

Small note: PhD candidates who followed the Scientific Publishing course have already heard a similar lecture by Jan Willem.
